

June 1, 1915

UNKNOWN MAN KILLED

An unknown man was killed by the east bound freight on the Milwaukee Friday night at about 10:40 o'clock, about a mile east of Groton. The train left Groton about 10:30 and when it arrived at Andover the crew telephoned Groton that a man had been run over. It was received in the tower at the crossing here and Mr. Ritchie, in charge there, immediately informed the section crew who went out for him. At that time he was unconscious and lying across the track, one limb, the left, amputated and the other badly broken and bruised. He was brought to the Groton hospital and the wounds dressed, but the shock was too great although he lived until 9:30 Saturday night.

There were no marks of identification either in the clothes which the unfortunate man wore or on the body except for an envelope upon which was the name Daniel Damn. It was believed for some time that he was a resident of Ipswich, but a telephone message there disproved the theory. Coroner Huebl came down from Aberdeen Sunday and viewed the remains but decided that an inquest was unnecessary. The remains will probably be buried in the Groton cemetery.